I believe that this country needs to uphold its copyright laws. OpenAI is not art, and it is not remotely needed or necessary for anybody. It does nothing but steal already created material from established artists and properties. It is functionally useless and is openly defying long-upheld laws that protect the property of many working Americans. American artists work hard to bring entertainment to the American people and they bring billions of dollars to this country. American Art is impactful, important, and a staple of this country's culture. The idea of spitting in the face of that by letting AI soulessly scrape it for "more content" is utterly shameful. AI does not create, it malignantly transforms already beloved ideas into grotesque slop that the American people have been repeatedly stating they heavily dislike and did not ask for. It is a waste of water, money, and time. Uphold our copyright law, keep our beautiful ideas and creations safe from this hideous machine. OpenAI challenging copyright law is a destruction to the foundation that America's art economy is built on. Do not push forward any legislation that changes that.
