I am writing as a private individual and a creator of written and podcast IP to leave a comment on the AI Action Plan.

The AI dominance the United States is pursuing is a pipe dream. Although generative AI has some uses in scientific contexts, the creation of large language models using personal IP is not only a violation of my property and privacy rights, but an insult to the creative efforts I put into my work, and under no circumstances should AI companies be allowed freedom from copyright law on the off chance that AI is actually useful in five years, or even one year. Do not let generative AI have unfettered access to the things I've written with my own mind and heart. Do not let companies flout copyright law, a legal protection, for a purely speculative "greater good."
