AI has no benefit to the American public outside of stealing from its hard work, stealing wages and scamming. So far with every major AI "innovation" not a single one has actually rising to the ranks of "useful". Every one has either been an outright scam or just a way to repackaging someone else's work, which is just stealing.

None of this even goes into the energy consumption issues. For a country that's hell bent on producing just more coal power it seems like they don't understand just how massively inefficient AI is. You'd just give it full access to the public's hard work and then give it endless amounts of power and money to do so. Sounds pretty communist to me.
