

Jeffrey Ginger

Integrating the understanding and application of AI into existing education is essential if the United States wants to stay at the forefront of innovation. Rather than dismantling or defunding systems of public education we can use this opportunity to emphasize and build out elements that contribute to a stronger and more adaptive workforce, such as AI-literate students and teachers.