Proper regulation for a.i is needed in moving forward. Reckless advancements and blind favoring for ai tech companies with the guise phrases such as "better tomorrow" are false and are at best pretexts that result in destructive outcomes for not just Americans but for the whole world. Millions upon millions and in the future billions of people's not only creative works, but also properties, ownerships and identities stolen, scraped and used by big tech corporations without even a bit of compensation or credit. Furthermore without proper regulations and restrictions all of this will continue without knowing what's real or fake. Not knowing what was permitted or what was unauthorized.

Google as with other companies/corporations have proven that their intentions are to monopolize online space and businesses. Google's use of a.i has been and continues to, with evidence from businesses, censoring publishers.

With the rampant use of a.i unchecked, artists/creators will be severely impacted as they are already by the use of ai in these few years. Humans first before a.i. The works made by human artists and creators are what got humanity this far. Without proper regulation of a.i, human artists and creators' works will continue to be vacuumed by big corporations to then mass produce pale imitations of ai amalgamations.

Copyrights have and should continue protecting human artists/creators. Not big tech corporations nor any other businesses that put themselves and a.i first. Human artists and creators have been hunted down and have had their works and identities stolen, scraped and trained on ai. Companies and corporations like Google have been slowly putting a.i images /visuals in the forefront, as a result, burying human artists and creators' work online.
