Generative AI and LLMs are environmentally destructive that cannot exist without infringing on the copyrights of thousands and thousands of individual creatives across a plethora of disciplines. For this reason alone, AI should have no place in a better future for the U.S. As a freelance illustrator who works closely with creatives from adjacent industries, such as animation and the music industry, I've already seen firsthand the way AI worsens workflow, production, efficiency, and final products, and yet continues to replace actual skilled laborers such as myself because higher-ups who do not have a strong understanding of how their actual product is made have bought into the false and easily disproven claims Silicon Valley makes about the future of AI.
