

3/12/2025 via FDMS

Lorien Chang

AI does not need to be general AI for it to be dangerous. We already have massive learning programs that can effectively addict and ensnare humans for hours or days. Current AI can produce emotions and media that are 'better than the real thing,' and it will only get more and more powerful. Without regulation, our people will wear out their lives in front of their computer screens, expiring alone in front of that glow, fully convinced to their last breath that this was the best, most rewarding possible use of their lives.