Good evening,

I'm very concerned about removal of any restrictions on un-compensated use of intellectual property during AI development. The use of other person's intellectual property in the development of AI without acknowledgement or compensation undermines the ability and incentive for people to share their labor and benefit from it under copyright law. It is theft and requires oversight so that during this AI development the person's involved employ proper fair use and permissions before taking advantage of others' work.

Thank you,
M Duval
