I am writing to condemn the allowance of AI companies to use any work however they may please. The hard work and effort that goes into creating art of any kind must be valued, and as such, this ignorance of the lived experience and abilities of our people is unacceptable. AI fails as a way to learn satisfying skills in life and dictates that we have become too reliable on technology. We must turn around and reclaim those skills that we once treasured and stop taking life's most precious gifts for granted. There's only so much money we can earn from AI before we start asking if earning it from hard work is a better option.

Pepper.
