We should not give AI companies immunity to copyright infringement lawsuits, especially when it comes to training data. AI is an environmental burden (intense energy requirements increase ghg emissions, the chips used require mining of heavy metals and the environmental destruction associated with that), and is going to cause job losses and real economic burden on working folks down the road. Just as I would not be allowed to publish copyrighted works as my own and profit off of them, AI companies should not be allowed to pollute, damage the environment, and erode humanity's critical thinking skills to increase shareholder value.
