

From: Troy Anderson
To: ostp-ai-rfi
Subject: [External] AI Action Plan (Please Reconsider)
Date: Monday, March 17, 2025 9:19:33 AM

CAUTION: This email originated from outside your organization. Exercise caution when opening attachments or clicking links, especially from unknown senders.

I request that you please reconsider your plans to remove any and all barriers on the development of AI, and for said restrictions to remain in place for the foreseeable future. How exactly does this benefit America? Will this help end the homelessness crisis? Lower the national debt? Feed the poor? I fail to see how this is what the country needs.

You are well aware that these AI models rely on the work of countless people, artists or otherwise, many of which are protected under copyright law, something companies fight tooth and nail to enforce, being upheld to the point it is considered a criminal offense when violated in some instances. Why is it then that this is any different?

I also worry this may set an unfair precedent that when its a matter of 'national security', something I imagine was kept vague on purpose, big tech companies can swoop in and use the hard work of others and give them nothing in return, not even giving them the option of opting in or out. Again, why is it that copyrighted material and intellectual properties are now suddenly free to be used by these companies without payment or even negotiation, when such a practice is grounds for legal action.

This may not be the first time you've gotten a message like this, and don't expect it to be the last.

All e-mails to and from this account are for NITRD official use only and subject to certain disclosure requirements.

If you have received this e-mail in error, we ask that you notify the sender and delete it immediately.