We do NOT need special regulations about AI. We already have more than enough regulations about what people or businesses may or may not do. If a payroll program messes up a payment, the business that operated the payroll program is liable. A court held an airline responsible for honoring a special fare offered by their AI program - the court ruled that the airline would have been liable if a human had offered the discount, so they were liable for what the AI offered.

What more do we need?

There is concern for deepfakes, but that has nothing to do with AI - if they should be illegal, they should be illegal regardless of how they're made. The same goes for putting people's faces on porn videos.

AI just makes it easier, it doesn't create a new crime.
