CAUTION: This email originated from outside your organization. Exercise caution when opening attachments or clicking links, especially from unknown senders.

Generative AI companies operate by scraping information from the open web. In doing such and then turning around and attempting to profit off of their AI's they are stealing the work of other people without permission or compensation.

This represents an unacceptable breach of the social contract towards writers, artists, and other individuals who create the "content" that companies like OpenAI steal for profit. This abandons the core principles that ones own efforts should be rewarded and that those who act like parasites and leech off of the hard work of others should be prosecuted and stopped from causing direct economic harm to others.

If I have to follow copyright law when I am producing works like books and music, then OpenAI has to follow the law too.

Do not allow generative AI companies to bypass the law.

Sincerely,

--A concerned US citizen.
